Message from Optimapharm CEO

IVANA WALLER

Dear Industry Colleges,

Welcome to Optimapharm's newsletter! We are delighted to, periodically, share our news and knowledge with you and we welcome your feedback!

As the CEO of Optimapharm, I have the privilege to work, daily, with an exceptional team of Optimapharm's professionals who are here to serve our clients, and ultimately our patients, with the utmost dedication. Our practical motto "We deliver on your promises" is a way of living and working for us. We recognize that our clients have made promises to their stakeholders: patients, employees, shareholders, investors, and others. We are here to support you, our clients, to deliver on your promises!

Our team is motivated because we passionately care about what we do – that is the basis for our shared identity, as one team!

As we have already entered the last quarter of 2023, I reflect on the whirlwind year it has been so far. We have embraced challenges, overcome obstacles, and celebrated many successes. It is important to keep in mind that we can rely on each other and grow together through all the experiences. We keep the purpose in mind. The purpose of showing up, every day, intentionally, for the benefit of our clients and patients.

One of the clients that we are working with on a pediatric study always talks about "our babies". These patients are not 'just' study subjects to them, they are "their babies" - they are our babies! Strong reminder of why we do what we do!

Sincerely yours,

Ivana

Dare to walk off the old path in cancer clinical trials!

Lately, the conventional sequential model of cancer clinical research is being replaced by adaptive trial designs, in which separate trial phases may be combined in a single protocol, thus accelerating drug development, and optimizing the use of available resources.

Gain new insights in Optimapharm's expert Dionysios Palermos article published in the Journal of Clinical Medicine.
